

6th International TAIJQUAN Push Hands - Meeting in Haßfurt am Main

from 31.05. - 03.06.2018

Thursday, Friday, Saturday and Sunday

It's my pleasure to invite you for a 4 – days TAIJI – push hands meeting with

Epi van de Pol, Hella Ebel, Thomas Kirchner, Dr. Herbert Winter and Roland von Loefen.

This meeting provides TAIJI - practitioners of all styles (Yang, Chen, Wu, Sun, Fu ...)

in a friendly and harmonious atmosphere to practice, to get to know, to share experiences

But the important thing is to go deep into the art of TAIJQUAN.

This Push Hands meeting will take place in the tradition of Master Huang and the manner of Wee Kee Jin's partner work.

It is not a meeting to fight or to train for competitions.

The theme of this event is:

Applying the classics of TAIJI (TAI CHI) for a better understanding of the principles.

In China, push hands was known in earlier days as an exercise of

"sensing and feeling “

Sometime later it was called push hands.

Push hands develop the internal qualities of the five elements;

these are:

- sticking – joining – adhering - following - no resistance and - not losing connection

This partner exercises and semi free - push hands will be guided or taught by

Epi van de Pol, Hella Ebel, Thomas Kirchner, Dr. Herbert Winter and Roland von Loefen

Fix push hands:

There are 18 partner drills in the system of master Huang

- called "fixed Pushing Hands".

Two of the most important ones are "seven pushes" and "slow push".

These two exercises allow you to study the inner qualities of the five elements...

These are mentioned in the first "taiji classic" (the one by Chang San-Feng) and correspond to move forward, backward, look left, look right and centred.

They are representing the five elements:

Fire - water - wood - metal – earth

These are the external principles - the internal principles are:

Sticking - joining - adhering - following - no resistance – not losing connection.

In fixed pushing hands and the semi free pushing hands, we create opportunity to recognise and sense these internal principles.

Free push hands:

In free pushing both partner have the opportunity (under the subject to the Taiji - principles) to bring the partner out of balance and then to issue the own "relaxed force".

What does this mean free - push hands:

Pushing means to feel if your partner lose his balance or can't neutralize, at this moment in order to strengthen your own stability by relaxing and sinking you can break the root of the partner to push him completely out with relaxed power.

Semi - free push hands:

In semi-free pushing hands, the aim is to unbalance your partner while the partner tries to neutralise without resisting or pushing back. This enables you to concentrate on your own role:

For example avoiding brute force, and breaking/loosening the root before "issuing" as mentioned in the "classics".

During neutralising, your partner is employing all internal principles of the 5 elements.

With the help of sticking - joining - adhering - following - no resistance - not losing connection one's yielding is cultivated and refined, so that every incoming force can be neutralized.

The advantage of semi-free push hands is that you can learn to "listen" or sense how your partner behaves. "Winning" is only secondary, you will change roles every 5 minutes.

In semi-free and free pushing hands your standing position is fixed and you don't step.

Every 10 minutes an acoustic signal reminds you to change partner and stance.

There are 3 different stances used in these kind of pushing hands:

V - Stance:

Feet in a "V" shape, heels together, and one foot distance to your partner.

Parallel Stance:

Feet parallel, shoulder width - also one foot distance to your partner.

Bow Stance:

Shoulder width, rear foot turned outward 45 degrees - front foot pointed forward, one foot length forward from the rear foot, and overlapping your partner's front foot.

It has been seen that it is no problem for practitioners to participate, even if they have little or no experience in free push hands. All advanced students are very much considerate to deal with the beginners.
